

As a leading company in numerous industrial areas, Robert Bosch GmbH follows the strategy to enhance business by connecting products as well as offering additional services.

With an IOT approach in focus, connectivity of things and services is the key for all applications. To achieve this, collaborative development is essential.

Because of this, Bosch is deeply interested in tools that enable organizations with different requirements and tool chains to collaborate within product creation.

The CPO is a promising initiative to support this. Consequently, Bosch was one of the first companies to sign CPO and expects increased effectiveness with the establishment of a certification process.
